SLAVERY IN BRAZIL,

And the conduct of the British government and its agents, in the attempted suppression of the slave trade.

Pennsylvania for his surrender justice.—New Haven Herald.

CHAPTER IV. Inferences from the foregoing chapters " long drawn

We will now detail our opinion as to the di-interest We will now detail our opinion as to the disinterest to our once, and mirely our norse and waggon to sidness of the English, and the benefit they have caused to the Negroes, to humanity, and to themselves. In the first place it is an undeniable fact, that the British nation has expended great sums of money, for the purpose of emancipating her own slaves, and remunerating other governments, for the loss they sustained by the attempt to suppress the trade. But was all this done with a purely philanthropic motive, and might not the privilege of search for which they have heretofore spent millions, be to them of much greater importance, than the enfranchisement of the slave?—

Again, judging from the past, it was certainly to their Again, judging from the past, it was certainly to their advantage to liberate from slavery those under them or John Bull would not have done it. This advantage is now apparent in the abstract, although at the time of the emancipation, enough could not be said, of the great Philanthropists of England, their great generosisinterestad she was, as we shall argue. As we all know her labor is cheap, too cheap, set in a sature of things cheap it must be; her manufacthe nature of things cheap it must be; her manufacity, kindkness of heart, and disinterestedness. Greatly __

DEMOCRATIC WHIG STATE CON. | tures must have a market, or starvation will follow As that market diminishes yearly in the Unite States, the same quantity must be disposed of else where, or ruin stares her in the face. The market the return cargo to fill the pockets of these philan-thropic Englishmen, human flesh. Still deeper is the right people. The disposal of her goods brings the money into the hands of the manufacturers, the discosal of the Negroes brings it into the exchequer of the crown, and helps to entice seamen to enter her service, under the hope of prize money, as well as to pay thos officers who are already there. > Presidents The negro she binds to a slave holder in Brazil, for the price of a slave, and for a time, at the termination of which, she never expects he is longer in the land of the living. Some she takes to Demerara, and her other West Indian possessions, and there, without askin the will of free men, as she pretends to call them she puts them into the rank and file of herarmy, that, when nominate a State Central Committee for the occasion offers, they may shed their blood for their captors, their lordly masters, and her gracious majes y Queen Victoria!

The next object which engrossed the attention of the British Cabinet, after having determined to eman cipate her slaves, was to accomplish it without too great a sacrifice, and that was effected in part, by obtaining the privilege of capturing the slave vessels of other nations. These captures are no expense to the government : on the contrary, a good school for the younger officers of her navy, and an employment for her men-of-war, that would otherwise be lying inactive, and going to ruin in her ports.

She troubles the whole civilized world with treaties on this subject, and the Quintuple treaty, that so ma ing resolution, which after brief remarks by ny have written about that so much legislation, and Messrs. Walton and Briggs, was unanimous-on, tends directly to this one overbearing, arrogant and totally unfounded right of search. She never has nations was Great Britain. She has seen her highest day of glory, during the reign of George the third, when nominate delegates to the above named con- she could call these United Courses her own. That vention, who are to be authorised to add to day has gone by, and can only be regarded amongst the "memories of the past." We gave her the first shock the first step to her downfall, of all the nations of the earth, and remember, we are destined to give her the last. Orators may talk, and statesmen prate about the nother and the daughter-unity of language, literature, interests, and such like stuff. We say no!that there is in reallity more deadly feeling, more hostility and jealousy, naturally existing between these two governments than any others on the face of the earth; and they may send as many special ministers to us as they see fit, sooner or later the outbreak must come, loth as Great Britain at present appears.

In concluding these articles we will remark, that the above is a cursory outline of our views on the subject of the slave trade, and the apparent endeavors and manœuvres of the English government to suppress t: and though no one can more heartily detest the traffic than we do, we are no believer in the disinterestedness of those who place themselves foremost among Philanthropists, as the African's friends.

The Brazilian government has been cajoled and threatened into a treaty for the suppression of slavery, but on their part it is merely a hominal thing. Their cruisers make no attempt to capture vessels engaged in the trade, whilat among those who are dependent upon the negro for their subsistence, and of course interested in its continuance, the greatest exasperation exists, at the endeavors of the English to suppress it. Did the English conduct themselves less arrogent-ly the prejudice entertained against them would be lessened; but it is well known, unfortunately for ty Committees for the ensuing year, the their national honor, that they will insult a weake power with impunity, when they can.

Again we say, let our government beware of her.-She is inwardly chafing at the success of republican ism in our country, and its rapid strides in her own king lom, as well as the rest of the world : and she is gently endeavoring in conjunction with the other monarchies of Europe, to compass us around, until from California, Texas, Oregon, Canada, and her West Indian pessessions, we shall be encompassed by land. Then she will agitate the great slave question. Anarchy and confusion will ensue ; murders, treason, John Porter, Hartford, chairman ; Henry N. Fuller- and all the horrible accompaniments of civil war, will be added to our national struggle. homes and our firesides inviolate, but in vain. Like poor groaning Poland, we shall fall a prey to the ambition and jenlousy of the whole world. That day we fervently pray and hope, will never, can never come we are merely looking into dim futurity and writing of possibilities: but let us show the world at large by our preparations, that should the attempt ever b made, we will give them, at their cost, further specimens of our past glory.

DEATH OF TUTOR DWIGHT .- We have to-day to perform the melancholy duty of announcing the death of Mr. John Breed Dwight, a Tutor in Yale College, caused by one of those unfor-tunate freaks which agitate the younger members of Yale College after their annual admission to the institution. Immediately after the commencement of the present academic term, some young rowdies of the advancing classes were paying their respects to the Freshmen in a course of induction prohibited by the rules of the institution, which Tudor Dwight, with others, attempted to suppress. In the performance of this duty, he seized a young man named Lewis Fassitt, of Philadelphia, and was in the act of drawing him to the light in order to recognize him, when Fassitt drew a knife or dirk, of some Eliab B. Tutor Dwight was son of Mr. James Dwight, Wm. Slade, Erastus Fairbanks, D. W. C. Son of the late President Dwight. He was only 21 years of age, and graduated at Yale College in the class of 1840. He was a gentleman of fine promise, and his loss will make a seriou void in the social and literary circles to which he was attached. Fassitt, the young man who now stands guilty of perpetrating the highest crime known to our laws, has left the city, and will probably escape. We understand, however, that measures have been instituted f r his apprehension; and that a requisition will be made to the Governor of Pennsylvania for his surrender to the hands of
